Dear <<Prescriber>>:

A recent review of patient profiles by the Wyoming Drug Utilization Review Program identified a number of patients that were “flagged” due to potential overutilization of stimulants. As a prescriber who frequently sees patients with ADD/ADHD and at times, uses stimulants in doses greater than recommended, I would like your input on the circumstances and indications for stimulant use greater than what may be dosage recommendations on the package information provided by the manufacturer. Please provide us with any recommendations you have when one goes over the FDA dose limit for monitoring like EKG, other exam requirements, etc.

Based on feedback from you, the program can adjust the dosage criteria for this category of medications to more accurately reflect current usage. Thank you in advance for your participation.

Sincerely,

Stephen Brown, MD
